“Sustainability and Languages:
Strategies for Course Development and Creative Engagement”

Facilitated by Peggy Barlett

A Piedmont Project half-day workshop for faculty in language departments to deepen understanding of sustainability issues, explore curriculum connections with resources here at Emory and in Atlanta, and develop creative curriculum renovations for a range of courses in many world areas and languages. As Emory embraces its strategic plan goals for every student to understand sustainability issues, the languages have an important role to play. Faculty will learn about “the hidden curriculum,” innovative assignments from other faculty, and campus projects available for class use. The workshop begins at 5:30 and is finished by 9:00 pm; dinner is included. Come join colleagues from across the University!
