Critical Race Pedagogy for More Effective and Inclusive World Language Teaching

Uju Anya
Associate Professor of Second Language Acquisition
Dietrich College of Humanities and Social Sciences, Department of Modern Languages
Carnegie Mellon University

September 16, 2022
10:30 am - 1:30 pm
Psychology and Interdisciplinary Studies Building (PAIS)
Room 225

(Space is limited for this event. Please RSVP right away and no later than September 12)

Workshop participants will discuss racism and inequity in the experiences of Black and other minoritized students in world language programs and learn how the theoretical framework of critical race theory (CRT) facilitates a clearer understanding of these problems. They will then be introduced to a critical race pedagogy for world language teaching (CRPWLT) to examine artifacts and instructional materials from their language programs and gain strategies to implement antiracist, equity-minded, and inclusive practices that help minoritized students succeed in world language studies.

Dr. Uju Anya is a scholar of language learning and Black experiences in multilingualism. An associate professor of second language acquisition at Carnegie Mellon University, her primary fields of inquiry are applied linguistics, sociolinguistics, and critical discourse studies examining race, gender, sexual, and social class identities in new language learning through the multilingual journeys of African American students.